

Benning Construction named '2012 Georgia Family Business of the Year' finalist

Fourth generation regional general contractor honored by Kennesaw State University

SMYRNA-Regional general contractor Benning Construction Company is a finalist for the 2012 Georgia Family Business of the Year Award, presented by the Cox Family Enterprise Center of Kennesaw State University.

Founded in 1953, Benning Construction Company (BCC) today is run by the third and fourth generation of the Benning family and is an employee-owned company.

The Georgia Family Business of the Year Awards recognizes Georgia companies that have thrived from one generation to the next. Nominees are evaluated upon their financial and non-financial contributions to their industries, society and Georgia's economy.

"We are deeply honored to be recognized among Georgia's leading family businesses," said T.R. "Ted" Benning III, president of Benning Construction.

"It has been a privilege to serve our loyal clients for over a half century and we look forward to many more decades of assisting developers, facility directors, owners and commercial tenants throughout the Southeast."

"This would not be possible without the dedication of the extended BCC family of employees, the majority of whom have been with BCC for more than a decade," said Kelly Benning Huckaby, director of Benning Construction.

"Thanks to their hard work, BCC continues its legacy of excellence, integrity and community service."

Benning Construction will be honored November 14, 2012, during an awards gala at the Renaissance Atlanta Waverly Hotel.
